Probability of detecting transiting extrasolar planets

Hubble detects Jovian planets in very tight orbits as they transit their host stars. Astronomers extrapolate from a core sample to the galactic bulge of the Milky Way: For a galaxy of 100 billion stars, approximately 500 million have hot Jovian planets that orbit their star in 5 or fewer Earth days.

